

Resources for Information on Health Care Reform

- <http://www.michigan.gov/healthcarereform>: This site contains information about what health care reform means to Michigan as well as the nation.
- <http://www.kff.org>: The Kaiser Family Foundation web site has a lot of thorough information. To get started, under “New & Noteworthy,” click on “summary of the law” for a good synopsis, and on “timeline” to see when various provisions of the law are scheduled to kick in.
- <http://www.familiesusa.org>: Families USA is a nonprofit advocacy organization for health-care consumers. Click on the link to “Health Reform Central” to see just about everything you need to know about the new law. To get a recap of the major changes, click on the link that begins “Help is on the way” on the homepage.
- <http://whitehouse.gov/health-insurance-consumer-protections>: This is straight from the Obama administration.
- <http://www.consumerreports.org/health>: From Consumer Reports, a range of useful information. Scroll to the bottom of the page, and click on “Health-care reform.”
- <http://www.marchofdimes.com>: The March of Dimes summarizes key new provisions for women and children. Click on “In the news.”
- <http://www.medicarerights.org>: The Medicare Rights Center summarizes key new provisions for seniors; click on the big box that says “learn more about health reform and Medicare.”

The Department of Health and Human Services also plans to launch a Web Site on health care reform including links to health insurance options it deems affordable in each state.