PRESS RELEASE

27 November 2019

Grand Ledge PFAS Update

Officials from the Michigan Army National Guard met yesterday with local, state, and federal representatives, including the City of Grand Ledge, Eaton County, Michigan PFAS Action Response Team (MPART), Michigan Department of Environment, Great Lakes & Energy (EGLE), and state and local health officials for a teleconference with the National Guard Bureau. The meeting was to discuss updates and next steps regarding PFAS in and around the Michigan National Guard Army Aviation Support Facility (AASF) located on Eaton Highway in Grand Ledge, Mich.

Previous testing indicated the presence of PFAS at the AASF. Currently, additional testing is occurring to define and delineate the issue.

During the meeting, Grand Ledge City Manager Adam Smith stated that the Grand Ledge city's water supply received a non-detect for PFAS.

A Town Hall is currently being scheduled for residents and concerned citizens. Details of the Town Hall will be forthcoming.

Additional information about PFAS and PFAS at the AASF may be found at www.michigan.gov/PFASresponse. The website includes PFAS background information and Frequently Asked Questions. The City of Grand Ledge website, at www.CityOfGrandLedge.com, provides information on the city's drinking water supply.
